It's not often (okay, it's nearly never) that we feature a sold-out event on our cover. After all, we're all about what there is to do, not what you missed – or are going to miss. But we're talking Ringo Starr here. A Beatle. One of the most iconic performers of the past 100 or so years. Hell, yeah, we're putting him on our cover. No, he didn't deign to talk to us, but Steve Penhollow talked to a lot of other people about him, and the results are some mighty fine reading on page 4 of this issue.

If you can't make the All-Starr Band show on Tuesday, June 21, the next best thing may be James McCartney's show at the Brass Rail two days later. Two things you'll want to know about this show: (1) The Orange Opera open, and (2) while his music sensibilities may differ from his famous father's, James sounds a whole lot like that other Beatle. You know, the cute one. You can read up a bit on James McCartney on page 11.

And if you can't squeeze into the Rail for that show, you might want to consider catching one of comedian/actor Brian Posehn's two shows at CS3 that same night. If you don't recognize the name, you'll certainly recognize the face. Read Deb Kennedy's feature on page 6.

There's more. Like Make Music Day 2016 which Michele DeVinney writes about in her Fare Warning column on page 16. Or Buskerfest, which is bouncing back after last year's rain out, on Saturday, June 25. Michele has details on page 5. And Michele also profiles All Fired Up, a brand new band with some very familiar players, on page 6.

That's a lot of stuff. So read on, enjoy your week and remember to tell 'em whatzup sent you.

A Little Help from His Friends

By Steve Penhollow

Popular local drummer and drumming instructor Todd Harrold said his young students care about exactly two bands that had their heydays in the 1960s and 1970s: Led Zeppelin and the Beatles.

The Rolling Stones no longer register for some reason, he said.

The music of Led Zeppelin and the Beatles will live on indefinitely, of course. But Led Zeppelin has no "face" at present, Harrold said.

"There's nobody playing those songs, really," he said. "But there's still Ringo (Starr) and (Paul) McCartney out there doing Beatles stuff and I think that's incredible."

Harrold said Starr and McCartney are two of the last representatives of an artistic renaissance that started in the 1960s and ended in the late 1970s. He believes that we have not seen their like since, and we may never see their like again. So it is important for young people to see them live while they still can.

Young people and other people will get their chance (or one of those chances) when Ringo Starr and his All-Starr Band performs at the Foellinger Theatre on June 21.

Starr has been joined on this tour by Todd Rundgren, Santana's Gregg Rolie, Toto's Steve Lukather and Mr. Mister's Richard Page.

Starr's first visit to Indiana came in 1964 when the Beatles performed at the Indiana State Fair.

Freelance writer and photographer David Humphrey released a book about that concert in 2014 called All Those Years Ago: Fifty Years Later, Beatles Fans Still Remember.

By email, Humphrey shared with me a story about one of insomniac Starr's nocturnal adventures.

The Beatles returned to the Speedway Hotel after the show, Humphrey wrote, and Starr could not sleep so he "began talking with Indiana State Trooper Jack Marks, who offered Ringo a ride in his state trooper car."

They drove to Marks' farmhouse in Noblesville and, at some point in the evening, "Marks let Ringo behind the wheel," he wrote.

"As the story goes, a state trooper passed Ringo and Marks, and noticed that a civilian was driving a state police vehicle," Humphrey wrote. "Apparently, Ringo drove down an alley and hid there while the other cop was trying to find them."

Starr and George Harrison also got to ride around the Indianapolis 500 track during their visit, he wrote.

A half-century has passed, yet the 75-year-old Starr (thanks, no doubt, to a combination of good genes, good living and good hair dye) looks very much the same.

To this day, Starr is dogged by accusations that he isn't a very good drummer, but Harrold and fellow Fort Wayne drummer Jawhole time.

"In a band situation," Simon said, "you've got drummers who can do that, who will go in and just lay time and play super solid. None of them get the credit. It takes a lot to play simple and be disciplined and just make the music work."

There were a number of flashier rock drummers than Starr in the 1960s, he said, but their flash wouldn't have worked in the Beatles.

"Can you imagine what the Beatles would have been if Ginger Baker or Keith Moon would have been their drummer?" Simon said. "I really think they would have sunk the ship."

Harrold said music history is awash in timeless drumming from musicians who were not master technicians.

"Ringo is kind of the same thing as the old Chess recordings with Odie Payne and Fred Below," he said, "the old Chuck Berry and Muddy Waters recordings. If you go back and listen to those, they still sound great. If you listen to 'Forty Days and Forty Nights' by Muddy Waters - that came out, I think, in the late 40s. It was recorded in Chicago with a drummer named Fred Below, and it still feels awesome. My god, it feels awesome."

"Or Bobby Blue Bland's 'Further Up the Road' with Jabbo Starks, who later played with James Brown," Harrold said. "Those still feel awesome. Those (drummers) were not technicians. That didn't come along for a while. But (the songs) still feel great."

Harrold said Starr's drum work on "I Am the Walrus" has the same staying power.

"The way that Ringo and McCartney worked together was really stunning," he said. "Like I say, there was no map. Their music didn't sound like (Bob) Dylan's music. Dylan's music came out of the blues, and there was a map for that."

"(The Beatles) sort of invented their own thing," Harrold said. "I don't want to overstate my case, but I think it's pretty obvious they came up with their own hybrid. That's what makes them so great. There's nothing like Sgt. Pepper's. There's nothing like Revolver. There's nothing like 'The White Album.' Astounding! And the Abbey Road drum solo is really hard to play, just so you know."

Simon said Starr's playing on "Come mie Simon say that such critiques don't hold water.

While it is indeed true, Harrold said, that Starr is no master technician on that instrument, he repeatedly proved capable of the brilliance that McCartney and Lennon required of him.

"The thing about Ringo is that there was no map for what they were doing," Harrold said. "When John Lennon brings you 'I Am the Walrus,' what do you play on drums? When he brings you 'Tomorrow Never Knows,' what do you play on drums? What do you do? He gets massive points from me for just being so inventive."

Simon said Starr had the taste and prudence not to get in the way of the music.

"I always looked at the drummer's position in a band as similar to that of an offensive lineman on a football team," he said. "Or the whole offense line, I should say. If a football team has a good offensive line, the quarterback looks like a star because he's able to stand up and throw the ball. If the offensive line is terrible, the quarterback looks horrible because he's lying on the ground the

Pitches & Circles

By Michele DeVinney

A funny thing happened on the way to last year's Buskerfest. Rain. And lots of it. While that in itself may not sound terribly amusing, there were aspects to the torrential downpour which provided a story or two to an otherwise disappointing wash out of the event.

"Everything was all set up for the next day, and then the rain just came pouring down," says Frank Howard, director of marketing for Downtown Improvement District. "The porta potties had already been put in place the day before, and when the storm hit, they got carried away down the streets. I came in the office the next day and asked 'What happened to all the porta potties?' and was told that the police found them lying in the middle of the street and called the company to take them away. They were already gone."

And so too was the event, forced to share downtown as part of Taste of the Arts in August. Hopefully, last year's weather complication is a one-time event and this year's Buskerfest, set for Saturday, June 25 from 4 to 10 p.m., will go off without a hitch. Howard and Cody LeMay, DID's events and programming manager, are doing all they can to provide a unique and exciting event and along the way learning themselves and educating the public about the art of busking. First up, changing the vocabulary they use for the event.

"We started noticing that when we were talking to the performers they weren't referring to a 'stage' but rather to a 'pitch,'" says LeMay. "I started to research and realized that 'pitch' was the term used for those roped off quarantined areas. Then there were also the organic 'circle shows' which is when the performers just start performing and a crowd gathers around them. So we'll have some of those as well as designated pitch areas."

"Ultimately what we want to do is encourage the busker culture in this city," says Howard. "It was just a few years ago that it was illegal for you to put out your guitar case or a hat on the ground in front of the Embassy or at the airport. The local ordinance changed in 2010, and since that time we've brought in buskers to have workshops teaching people how to develop their own act, and we've had a lot of success with that."

While there are still acts coming from other areas of the country, Howard is pleased that many locals are now participating and others are invited to drop by and perhaps show their own talents. While DID expands upon the annual Buskerfest, now in its seventh outing, and bring new performers to the fold, they also want it understood that there's a way for the audience to show their own appreciation.

"We're bringing in acts from miles away, and this is how they make a living," says Howard. "While Buskerfest is a free event, and people can come down and enjoy the performances without a ticket, the performers deserve to make a little something for their efforts."

"It's generally understood that if you stop and watch something, you should give them at least a dollar," says LeMay. "We want to ingrain that culture into our city because this is how they make a living. It's not about starving artists."

While the first couple Buskerfests were still a new event to the community and the demand and talent was still emerging, LeMay has discovered that the city has embraced Buskerfest, a fact confirmed by its recent naming as one of the favorite quirky festivals in the region.

BUSKERFEST
4-10 p.m. Saturday, June 25
Foellinger Theatre
Wayne & Calhoun streets, Fort Wayne
downtownfortwayne.com/buskerfest/

"There's now this enormous appetite for this festival," says LeMay. "It's taken on a life of its own."

One of the popular characters from Buskerfest's early day was a Green Army Man statue, and when that performer came to the city for a workshop, teaching all of the intricacies of how to move and breathe and capture the essence of a character, a local woman emerged with her own character, Marie Antoinette, an immediate hit with Buskerfest attendees.

"There really hadn't been anything young lady-centric in the festivals before," says Howard. "And suddenly all the young girls, from three to 15, just a wide age range, were going up and touching her. And in turn she would curtsy and spin them. It was really great to see, and it shows how the festival is just organically developing that 'wow' factor."

If there has been any downside to the growing 'wow' factor and popularity of the event, it's that for people surrounding the performers, especially young ones, it can be difficult to see over the expanding sea of bodies and heads. In anticipation of that, DID is bringing in a Jumbotron screen to facilitate visibility. The acts you'll be seeing will include Dimension of Illusion, Circules, Kobler Jay, Rob and Miss Jane Show, Seb Whipits and Pyroscope on the Busker Central Pitch and Secret Mezzanine, Chris Rutkowski and Renee Gonzales, elle/the Remnant, G Money Unplugged and Bloody Tambourine and the Musical Mafia on the Loud and Local Music Pitch. Of course, other acts will be moving through the area, centrally

Reunited Brothers

By Michele DeVinney

When Mark Magdich left the successful band Brother, he quickly began to suffer remorse. Not that he necessarily regretted his decision, but he did miss playing with his two brothers who had given the band's its name. His brother Chris shared that desire to play with his big brother again, and together they sought to find a new way to make music.

"I retired from Brother in 2014, and since then I've dealt with a few health things, cancer and back surgeries," says Mark. "But I really missed playing with my brothers, so I said to Chris, 'Let's go find a couple more dudes to join us.'"

Those dudes – guitarist Brian Kinerk and drummer Beto Magana – are no strangers to local music fans. Mark called them to join the band, and Kinerk, who has known Mark since they were both youngsters, was quick to sign on.

"I've known Mark since I was 17 years old," says Kinerk. "I know he's a great player, and he's one of the nicest human beings I've ever known."

Magana, who was then with the band Sum Morz, was somewhat more reluctant.

"Beto was my first choice," says Mark. "But he was happy with Sum Morz, and I totally got it. In the meantime, I called a couple of other people, but Beto gave me a call and said 'I'll take it.'"

The foursome met at Cheddar's last September, mostly to see how they all got along together and found an immediate rapport, primarily because they all had the same vision for what their new band – All Fired Up – would be.

"I just want to get out and have some fun," says Magana. "When we get together it's like we're kids. We're like 15-year-olds getting together and goofing around. We love to play together. There's no sense of competition among the four of us. We're just doing what we love and having fun."

"We all have the same sense of humor," adds Chris Magdich. "We can be in the middle of rehearsal and just look at each other and fall down laughing. We work hard and take our music seriously, but we don't take ourselves too seriously."

The connection among the players went beyond clicking personally. It was also apparent that they knew what they wanted to band's sound to be.

"I grew up playing this kind of music," says Kinerk. "When we sat down to decide what we wanted this band to be, there was no variation. We all had the same idea."

Mark Magdich says those who know Brother can expect a similar sound from All Fired Up, but a more pop-oriented variation on that theme.

"Our goal is to keep the dance floor packed every single minute," says Mark. "We have about 40 songs we're doing right now, and there are a few metal songs – but really more pop metal like Judas Priest. We keep adding songs to our list too."

There's also a hope that eventually All Fired Up will be featuring original material as well, and hopefully in the not too distant future, a CD will be possible. Making a growing set list of covers and the hope of new material possible is the band's professionalism, something each member appreciates.

"We've all been in situations where there's a lot of BS," says Chris. "Here, we're all a little older, and everybody is prepared and on time for rehearsals. Every time there's a rehearsal, everybody comes ready to work."

Kinerk echoes those sentiments, saying that "it's the band's work ethic that I really like. I've been in other bands where that hasn't been the case ..."

"Where someone is always late," says Magana, finishing Kinerk's sentence. "Where there's a lot of drama and baggage."

Feature • Brian Posehn

Living la Vida Nerd

By Deborah Kennedy

Brian Posehn – actor, stand-up comedian, writer, recovering Star Wars fan – is a funnyman who's made a career out of being bitter. That might not seem like promising fodder, but it's like Henry David Thoreau once said: "I am sorry to think you do not get a man's most effective criticism until you provoke him. Severe truth is expressed with some bitterness."

Posehn, who might be best known to TV viewers as Brian Spukowski from The Sarah Silverman Program and Kevin Liotta from Just Shoot Me!, is no stranger to severe truth. He's been dishing it out – and taking it – since he started in comedy and acting in the mid90s.

A bear-like man (he's 6'7") who often appears on stage and screen sporting a bushy ginger beard, Posehn is happy to rant about everything from his farts to George Lucas's betrayal of Star Wars fans and everything in between.

Not that he takes himself too seriously. Quite the opposite. This is, after all, the man whose second full-length comedy album, released by metal label Relapse Records, is simply and aptly titled Fart and Wiener Jokes. The follow-up to his 2006 debut Live In: Nerd Rage, Fart and Wiener Jokes is just that – a comedy special devoted to the lowest common denominator. And his latest release, The Fartist, picks up where farts and wieners left off. Obviously Posehn, who will take the Tiger Room stage at CS3 Thursday, June 23 for both a 7 and 9 p.m. show, is a boy who just wants to have fun.

He told The Onion's AV Club that Fart and Wiener Jokes is, on one hand, a joke in itself.

"I'm saying basically, like, 'Take off your thinking caps, lower your expectations, and we're just going to have fun. I brought my fart and wiener jokes out from Los Angeles.' That's the way I was opening for a while. So, that was on the record when I recorded it. And then when I was thinking of titles, much the way I came up with Nerd Rage for the last record, I was looking at joke titles to see if I could get the album title from that. It's just me making fun of myself, like, 'This is all I've got!'"

It clearly isn't all he's got. With countless television appearances under his belt, not to mention two Emmy nominations and a host of writing credits, Posehn's self-deprecation is a bit of a smokescreen. He's clearly a multi-faceted talent famous for his deadpan delivery, wide-ranging topics of interest and a voice that bends easily to fit any part. He's lent his chords to such shows as Aqua Teen Hunger Force, Bob's Burgers and The Haunted World of El Superbeasto, to name three. Also to the video games Halo 2, Cartoon Network Universe: FusionFall and Minecraft: Story Mode. He's even starred in his own music video, Metal by Numbers, which has been viewed over 2 million times on YouTube and MySpace.

Given that Posehn is a self-identifying nerd, it will come as no surprise to many that he's penned a few comic books, including Deadpool Vol. One: Dead Presidents, Deadpool Vol. Two: Soul Hunter and The Last Christmas.

He's also a dad, and a dad who often worries about putting too many "kids are poop machines" jokes in his act, according to an interview he did with Austinist.

"I was a little worried at first because – and I've talked about it on stage – I always hate it when guys change when they have kids. They'll be edgy, and then they'll totally change and be too precious about their kids or tell jokes you've heard a million times about how they're all poop machines. It's true, they are machines that crank out a lot of poop, but I feel like we've heard that. I've

Secret Mezzanine

Passing Dreams

The sounds of the space age in the intro that kicks off Secret Mezzanine's Passing Dreams hint at a modernist ambition in the duo's music, and the album's track listing, with song titles like "Electron," "Diode" and "First Derivative Rule," suggest that there's some physics/math geekery afoot as well. But the music of Cai Caudill and Rob Greene is anything but cold and high-tech. Instead, there's a thread of easy traditionalism that runs throughout the album's eight tracks.

The foundation of the album is the duo's guitar work, most often a spritely acoustic interplay that keeps the songs moving at a brisk clip. Those familiar with the duo's covers know their fondness for the Black Keys, but here Secret Mezzanine forego that band's trademark distortion and grit for a cleaner sound. Similarly, where the vocals on Passing Dreams are often reminiscent of a 90s-grunge-rock moan, they never slip down to that genre's level of despair.

Instead, Secret Mezzanine often jump back a generation and dig up earlier influences, throwing in 60s-style wah-wah or reverb effects to create a vintage atmosphere that meshes nicely with their fresh song structures. That the duo can make their music seem so firmly aware of the 20th century while still featuring the occasional ukulele speaks to the versatility of their musicianship. (Evan Gillespie)

Mythic Sunship

Ouroboros

Copenhagen's Mythic Sunship dabble in a raw kind of free-form jamming that gazes into the heart of the sun and then goes full force into the blazing star's fiery center. There's no smoothing out the rough edges with these guys, no breezy synth textures or ambient head space created on their debut, Ouroboros. In fact, they make those rough edges as jagged as possible and let the shards fall where they may. Ouroboros is a three-track full-length that expands minds while melting them at the same time.

Mythic Sunship's Ouroboros is yet another excellent long player coming out of the wilds of Denmark and curated by those musical merry pranksters at El Paraiso Records. You'd be hard pressed to find anything short of brilliant coming out of that label (listen to their previous 2016 releases Jakob Skott's All the Colours of the Dust and Nicklas Sorensen's Solo for proof.) Mythic Sunship are no different, and Ouroboros packs a musical wallop.

"Ophidian Rising" starts right up and never lets go of the jugular. It's a full-throttle, doomy fuzz jam in the Sabbath-ian tradition, with some serious stoned-out groove thrown in for good measure. These guys have a bevy of stomp boxes at their disposal, and they seem to have no problem engaging a good portion of them here in this 10-minute opener. Those of you that worship at the altar of Isaiah Mitchell and Earthless will find plenty to bow down to right here.

"Year Of The Serpent" floats among the crystalline skies and never wavers in its mission to capture the feeling an out-of-body experience. As the song progresses, so do the spaced-out fuzz and feedback battles. This is one of those classic basement tracks. Crouched in a bean bag chair with Koss headphones strapped to your head, you let the song fill your skull. There's a pint of your favorite brew next to you, the incense fills the air in that dark space that surrounds you and the only light is the strobe on the turntable.

Before flipping the record you need to go upstairs and get a refill of that brew because all of side two is dominated by the epic mind melter "Leviathan," a 21-minute explosion of noise, riffs and tribal beats that eventually turns into an all-out aural assault. Doom, psych, and free-form exploratory riffing is all over this track. It's a workout of epic proportions.

With a band name that tips their hat to the likes of John Coltrane and Sun Ra, you're setting expectations pretty high among the musicphiles (nerds) of the universe. But there's no denying this Copenhagen four-piece their ambition and musical means of surpassing that ambition. Ouroboros is one hell of a debut, stocked with plenty of raw rock grit and intellectual noodling to satisfy even the most finicky of musical tastes. ## BACKTRACKS

Styx

Equinox (1975)

Styx were a Chicago-based band that made it big due to the heavy rotation of their single "Lady" on WLS radio in 1973. This record was their fifth release, their first on a major label (A&M).

"Light Up" kicks off the record and is a poppy, romantic number with the familiar vocals of Dennis DeYoung and a heavy synth. "Lorilei" follows. A brighter tune than some of their earlier stuff, and perfect for album-oriented-rock radio, it also hit the charts.

"Mother Dear" has a more progressive feel about it and blends some guitars, percussion and keyboards that rivals something Yes produced in the mid-70s.

"Midnight Ride" opens side two. It's one of the heavier rock songs they had done up to that point and features guitarist James Young on the vocals. "Born for Adventure" continues the heavy sound with guitarist John Curulewski showing what Styx could have sounded like had they chosen a different direction. Curulewski actually quit the band after this album because he wanted them a little heavier. Current member Tommy Shaw replaced him in 1975.

"Prelude 12" is an acoustic number that sort of segues into "Suite Madame Blue" which closes the album. But at just 80 seconds, you hardly notice it. "Suite Madame Blue" wholly represents the Styx sound up to that point. I hate to call it pretentious, but it was an enormous bombast of sound that was so over the top, you almost couldn't like it. Acoustic guitars, DeYoung's manicured vocals and weighty harmonies can't conceal the enormity of the last two minutes of this song.

It's sort of cool that these guys made it because a Chicago DJ was proud of some local musicians.

Styx will be in Fort Wayne on Saturday, June 18 at the Foellinger. (Dennis Donahue)

THE KILLS

ASH AND ICE

Allison Mosshart and Jamie Hince, aka The Kills, are known primarily for their stripped-down baby blues style. Their debut, Keep on Your Mean Side, took the indie rock scene by the throat, and now, four albums later, Ash and Ice is proof the best tunes sometimes come to those who wait. Standouts include the Afro-pop-infused "That Love," "Bitter Fruit" and "Black Tar." Pick up your copy for $11.99 at any Wooden Nickel Music store.

Together" is both simple and perfect.

"It's so simple that almost nobody would think to do it," he said. "It's absolutely perfect for the tune. When you hear a drummer not do it that way, it just sounds weird."

If you want evidence of the high esteem in which Starr is held by his fellow icons, Harrold said, look no further than the people he has been touring with since the late 1980s.

Starr has spent the last three decades fronting bands composed of some of the biggest names in rock music, and Harrold believes that only Starr could have assembled them.

"Think about who is in that band right now," he said. "Do you think Todd Rundgren would be a sideman for anyone else? Do you think Steve Lukather from Toto would be a sideman for anyone else?"

Reviews for the current tour have been effusive, and it is because Starr knows how to entertain, Simon said.

"People don't dance to polyrhythms," Simon said.

Whatever all those women are screaming about on live Beatles recordings, Simon said, it sure isn't polyrhythms.

located at Wayne and Calhoun.

For those looking for a bite to eat during the festival, there will be five food trucks in addition to the plentiful supply of restaurants open for business that evening. It's all part of the larger plan to make people feel at home in downtown, with comfortable sights, scenes, entertainment, food and beverage, a plan that Howard says makes the area part of every residents' sense of home.

"We call downtown everybody's neighborhood, and that's what we're trying to cultivate. A lot of people now don't even know their own neighbors anymore, but when they come downtown they run into friends and people they know. It makes downtown feel like it belongs to everyone."

Trubble Brewing Holds Re-Opening

Since Trubble Brewing took over the old Chap-pell's building on Broadway last year, it has become a destination for folks seeking good craft beer and delicious budget-friendly food. Although I haven't gotten down there as much as I'd like to lately, it's still one of my go-to destinations whenever I break free for a night. On Saturday, June 25 from 2 p.m.-midnight, Trubble Brewing will be having a grand reopening. During the event, you'll be able to throw back some of their own brewed beers — including Mindtrap IPA, DogJaw Peanut Butter Stout, 9 Crimes Rye PA and more — and enjoy a hog roast and live music by Kevin Hambrick, the Knit Cap Vigilantes, The Shutters, O'Sister Brother, The Be Colony, Streetlamps for Spotlights and more. There are three different ticketing options for the re-opening, ranging from $10-$65, through Brown Paper Tickets.

The annual Honor Run & Brew Jam will also be taking place that day and will benefit a worthy cause. The event will begin and end at Fort Wayne Outfitters and will have you trekking through the downtown area. This isn't your average run, as an after-party awaits you after you work up a sweat and put your legs to the test. The entry fee ranges from $39-$49 and covers entrance to the 5K run/walk, a nice T-shirt, two cups of craft beer of your choice and entry to the Beer

Out and About

Jam after the race. If you're under the age of 21, don't worry; this event is open to all ages. In addition to the run, craft beers and live music, local food trucks will also be on hand for your calorie-depleted bodies. The Honor Run Project Inc. is a non-profit organization which seeks to honor and extend deep gratitude to our local American military veterans by providing funds to Honor Flight Northeast Indiana through hosting fundraising events. Georgetown Fridays are back at Georgetown Square. Located in front of the Georgetown Library, you'll be able to enjoy food and beverages from Georgetown tenants, kids' activities and, of course, live music. Bring a lawn chair or blanket and enjoy the start of your weekend. Set to entertain this summer are Renegade (June 24), Good Night Gracie (July 22) and Junk Yard band (Aug. 26). Georgetown Fridays takes place from 6:30-8:30 p.m.

JAMES MCCARTNEY
W/THE ORANGE OPERA
 8 p.m. Thursday, June 23
 The Brass Rail
 1121 Broadway, Fort Wayne
 $12, 267-5303

If James McCartney's last name looks familiar, that's because it is. McCartney is, indeed, the son of British rock n' roll royalty Paul and Linda, but this 38-year-old singer-songwriter is a star in his own right. Touring Europe and the U.S. to promote his new album, The Blackberry Train, McCartney will be at the Brass Rail Thursday, June 23 for a one-nighter with The Orange Opera.

JAMES MCCARTNEY

The Cute One's son becoming a musician might seem, to many, a matter of predestination, or, at the very least, predisposition. Having spent his first two years of life on the road with his parents during their Wings years, the precocious McCartney later contributed to their solo albums Flaming Pie, Driving Rain and Wide Prairie, strumming a guitar Paul gave him on his 9th birthday and that had once belonged to Carl Perkins.

In 2010, McCartney stepped out of his famous father's shadow and released the EP Available Light, followed the next year by Close at Hand. Soon he had enough material for his full-length debut, the fiercely independent Me. With his latest effort, McCartney is dipping his toe in a grungier pool, having enlisted Nirvana and PJ Harvey producer Steve Albini to guide the album's sound.

Regardless of whether he's on stage, in the studio or alone at home doing the stuff all humans do, McCartney said his main aim is to become better.

"I just want to keep on going, keep working, and improving as a songwriter. I'd love to feel that I realized my full potential both as a person, and as a songwriter. That feels like a great, fulfilling goal to shoot for. Making a lot of music, and striving for more depth artistically – those are my goals." (Deborah Kennedy)

And with this band, everything just fell into place."

At the core of that cohesiveness are the Magdich brothers, both of whom are just happy to be working together again.

"Mark and I are best friends," says Chris. "Besides being in a band together, we work together at Sweetwater. Even when Mark was in California and I was here, we talked more on the phone than we talked when we were growing up. There are a lot of times when he and I know what the other one is thinking without it being said, but it's also like that with the four of us on stage. We're becoming like a family that way too, where we can just look at each other and know what the other one is thinking."

With a few gears already under their belt, All Fired

Up look to expand their horizons and should build their fan base significantly this summer when they open for Night Ranger at the Three Rivers Festival. Mark Magdich recalls when Brother played at the Whammys and their Facebook page received 500 hits that night and the next day. He's hoping for a similar boost to their Facebook page from their gig opening for a national act, but he says he's also happy playing smaller venues too.

"At this point I think we are primed," he says. "We're locked and loaded, and we'll do anything. We'll play a 50-seat bar and be happy because that's really a lot of our roots. I love that connection with the audience. I really think right now that the sky's the limit for this band."

been real conscious to not do anything that I feel like I've heard."

Instead, he takes a walk on the more complex side of the street, exploring the gamut of emotions a man might experience when he becomes a father. One of those emotions is humility, because even though he used to do a bit in which he asked the audience to haul off and punch his baby in the face if he ever became the kind of parent who swore his kid "fell from heaven and was made of angel wings and muffins," he admits, now that he's a parent, that he'd prefer you keep your paws off his son.

"I'd like him to remain un-punched for as long as possible," he says in a live performance of The Fartist. "And I know, having my [censored] nerd genes, that will not work out for him."

But maybe dorks finish first. Posehn – star of HBO's acclaimed Mr. Show and the WB's Mission

Hill, whose resume includes cameos on Friends, Seinfeld, Reno 911!, Tim and Eric Awesome Show, Great Job!, Californication, The Big Bang Theory and New Girl – is certainly proof that nerd genes can serve a dude quite well. In addition to touring the country and telling fart and wiener jokes, Posehn keeps himself busy writing Deadpool comics and starring in a Dungeons and Dragons podcast alongside some of his best nerd friends. Does it get better?

"I always talk about how lucky I feel," he told Splitsider. "None of those things are making me rich or building my empire or whatever, but they're two other fun things to do. So when I'm home, I look at the calendar and I look forward to having those things. Because we had killed our D&D games when my son was born."

"So, yeah, it is a little bit of a nerd's dream I get to continue that and entertain people."

Volbeat have a busy late summer and early fall planned as they go out on tour to support their newest album, Seal The Deal & Let's Boogie. The Danish band is visiting Detroit on August 12 and Columbus, Ohio the following night. Killswitch Engage and Black Wizard open the shows. I'd look for winter dates visiting tertiary markets like Fort Wayne to be announced sometime during that fall tour, as its likely Volbeat will be on the road for a least a year with this album.

The fact that they have no new music to offer up at this time is not going to stop moe. from touring. The New York jam banders have been finding excuses to play live since 1992 and, by golly, 2016 is not going to be an exception. Look for them when they play a two-night stand at Chicago's Concord Music Hall September 23-24, Kent, Ohio September 28 and Cincinnati September 29.

Fort faves Halestorm will visit the Summit City July 24 as part of the Carnival of Madness tour with Shinedown, Black Stone Cherry and Whiskey Myers. While that tour hasn't even launched yet, the band is planning a fall tour that sees them headlining a bill that also includes 80s icon Lita Ford and up-and-coming band Dorothy. If you don't get your fill of the Hale at the Parkview Field show, then make the short trip north to Kalamazoo to see the band October 25 at the State Theatre. I met Lzzy's mom once. She was a nice lady.

Prophets of Rage is a new group of familiar faces preparing to tour the sheds this summer. The band consists of Rage Against The Machine members Tom Morello, Brad Wilk and Tim Commerford along with Chuck D and DJ Lord from Public Enemy and B-Real from Cypress Hill. The band begins its first tour in Cleveland during the Republican National Convention on July 19, then plays Indianapolis on August 30, Detroit on September 1 and Chicago on September 3. There's no word yet on who is daring enough to try to open for these shows. They'll be out of control.

The North Coast Music Festival bills itself as "Summer's Last Stand," as it takes place September 2-4 in Chicago's Union Park. Hometown boys Umphrey's McGee are one of the top bands on the bill that also includes Bassnectar, The Claypool Lennon Delirium, Matt & Kim, Greensky Bluegrass, Zedd and Grouplove. Three-day tickets start at $159.

The Fulton County Fair in Wauseon, Ohio, about a half hour west of Toledo, has announced that Rock and Roll Hall of Famers Cheap Trick will headline the entertainment grandstand on Sunday, September 4. Larry the Cable Guy takes the stage with his redneck humor on Labor Day. Some fun facts about the Fulton County Fair, courtesy of their website: over 285,000 people attended last year's fair where 108 food vendors sold over 40,000 milk shakes. Sadly there were no statistics provided on the number of lemon shake-ups sold or the amount of cow manure shoveled. Tickets for both shows go on sale July 12.

Arena Wraps Season With a Bang

A community theater can't go wrong with a season-closing show like South Pacific, as Arena Dinner Theatre has proven. Already sold out before opening night, the production lives up to its reputation.

The 1949 Rodgers and Hammerstein classic musical features gorgeous music, a winning heroine, a suave leading man, a pair of star-crossed young lovers, and an assortment of hilarious supporting characters. It also made waves in the mid-20th century for taking a strong stand against racial prejudice.

Set in the New Hebrides Islands east of Australia (now known as Vanuatu) during World War II, the musical centers around Nellie Forbush (Leah Wedler), a spunky Navy nurse from Little Rock, Arkansas, who has recently met wealthy French plantation owner Emile de Beque (Aaron Mann). Their romance has blossomed quickly — too quickly for them to really get to know each other. She later learns that he has two children by a Polynesian woman. In 1949, this is particularly scandalous.

Curtain Call

JEN POIRY-PROUGH

Meanwhile, Lt. Joe Cable (Jordan Gameon) also falls quickly in love — with a young Tonkinese woman, Liat (Amber Rudolph). Both Forbush and Cable must confront their prejudices head on and decide what is really important to them, especially when Cable and de Beque go on a dangerous spy mission they know they may not come back from.

Wedler and Mann have fantastic onstage chemistry together and excellent singing voices, as does Gameon, who sang some beautiful high notes. Wedler also has the chance to show off her dancing skills during the crowd-pleasing second act

Set Next Tuesday Aside for Music

For the past couple of decades, Make Music Day has been a growing international grassroots effort to encourage everyone to take a little time on the Summer Solstice (June 21) to dedicate themselves to making music. It's really a modest request, and yet it has brought joy to thousands for many years. It sometimes takes Fort Wayne a little time to jump into these movements, but once it did, it put its heart and soul into it.

Of course, pushing the city along is its music headquarters, Sweetwater Sound, which has made Fort Wayne a must-see stop for music gear of all kinds. When Sweetwater decided that Fort Wayne needed to be part of Make Music Day, it was going to happen. And they put someone pretty cool in charge of it. Jenifer Lock, Sweetwater's public events coordinator, and I are practically related. (Well, her husband and my son used to be in a band together. That qualifies as practically related, right?) Her approach to building this event was genius. They started small, introducing the city to the idea and providing a few fun ways to make music — and listen to it.

Although last year's Make Music Day conveniently fell on a Sunday — and Father's Day, to boot — this year's installment falls on a Tuesday, which gives everyone a good excuse to take the day off or just plan on an extended lunch hour at Freimann Square where the fun will be going on from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. If you really can't get away (and what kind of life do you have if you can't get away to make music one day a year?) then rest assured that the party will continue in the evening at SevenGen,

Fare Warning Michele DeVinney

The Dash-In, CS3 and The Brass Rail.

One of the basic rules of Make Music Day is to not be intimidated. If you've never picked up an instrument in your life (unlikely that anyone hasn't at least touched one, but I'm trying to make a point here) this is the perfect opportunity to do so. No fears, no performance anxiety — just give it a go. Maybe it won't change your life forever, but since it's never too late to try, you never know what doors you may be opening. (And if you decide to pursue playing music more seriously, Sweetwater might have some ideas for how you could go about accomplishing that.)

In addition to the chance to make music, there will also be excellent chances to hear some great music. Bands performing on two stages at Freimann Square include Soft and Heavy, Exterminate All Rational Thought, Secret Mezzanine, Sophia Slates, Trichotomous Hippopotamus, The Addison Agen Band and The Alicia Pyle Quartet. (For those of you who may be curious, EART is the band in which Jen's husband Peter and my son Jamie played together.)

Obviously downtown Fort Wayne is the place to be on June 21, and since it's the longest day of the year, you may as well make it a musical one.

A Must-See for Downton Fans

Flix

CATHERINE LEE

"No one really deserves Lady Susan" is said many times in Love and Friendship. Even at the beginning we know this is a winking statement because Lady Susan displays concern only for herself and her schemes. As the movie plays, the line becomes even funnier as the depth of her scheming becomes clearer. No one deserves Lady Susan.

Love and Friendship is a film by Whit Stillman who wrote, produced and directed. But he went even further. The film is based on an early novella by Jane Austen, written in the epistolary form, and letters don't easily create a flow. So Stillman wrote his own novelization and has expanded the work.

If Austen isn't your cup of tea, (a) what is wrong with you? and (b) give Love and Friendship a chance. I am a fan of many of the film adaptations of Austen's novels, but many of them do drain the novels of their humor. Clueless, Amy Heckerling's contemporary adaptation of Emma, has humor front and center, but I don't think any film has captured Austen's wit and bite as well as Love and Friendship.

Stillman is a control freak. He's made just five films, taking years to make each. Until now they have all been original work crafted solely from his imagination. My favorite is his first film, Metropolitan, a comedic take on privileged college students in New York City. Working with someone else's material must have been a liberating experience because Love and Friendship is his best film.

Lady Susan is the basis for the film. Love and Friendship is the title of Austen's other early work, both published only after her death. It is a comedy of conniving set in England at the end of 18th century, so the locations are gorgeous. The costumes are beyond spectacular. But this is not as stuffy as Downton Abbey, although if you are a Downton fan, Love and Friendship is a must-see.

Kate Beckinsale is stupendous as Lady Susan, a less-than-grieving widow who has no money. What she needs is a new husband and one for her daughter Frederica. Beckinsale never misses a beat. The dialogue is complicated. She never slips. She is the haughty Lady Susan. "Facts are horrid things" is typical of her thinking.

In an interesting book by Michael Suk-Young Chwe, Austen is one author credited with the origins of game theory, very much on display in Love and Friendship. The world is Lady Susan's chessboard. She is moving all the pieces and has no intention of losing.

She wants a rich husband she can dupe because she is much more interested in dallying with the married Lord Manwaring. Her co-conspirator in all things is her friend Alicia Johnson, the wonderful Chloe Sevigny. (The two actresses worked together on another Stillman film, The Last Days of Disco.)

There are far too many characters to list, but all of the actors give delightful performances, fueled by a script that I hope is heading for an Oscar nomination.

I will mention the comic relief because he is too wonderful. Tom Bennet charms as Sir James Martin, described as "a bit of a rattle," a term of the time for a dunderhead. He steals every scene he is in, especially the scene where the Twelve Commandments are discussed.

In a very lovely scene, poor Frederica seeks sanctuary in the church. Here the curate gives her kind advice reminding her that the world is filled with beauty, truth, good. In Love and Friendship there is plenty of beauty, very little truth, but oh, it is good!

Horror Dominates the Box Office

Tops at the Box: The Conjuring 2, directed by James Wan and starring Vera Farmiga and Patrick Wilson, opened big, selling just over $40 million in the U.S. over its first three days of release. Add to that another $50 million abroad and The Conjuring can already be considered a big financial success. Reviews have been very solid. Looks like another great horror flick.

Also at the Box: Warcraft took the No. 2 spot last weekend, selling $24 million in the U.S. over its first three days of release. Looks really awful to me. Now You See Me 2 took the No. 3 spot at the box office, selling $23 million over its first three days of release. Not good, not bad. I thought this one was going to be big. Jesse Eisenberg is so good at being Jesse Eisenberg, but do people love Jesse Eisenberg? It doesn't really seem like it, does it? Regardless, I bet Now You See Me 2 is really fun.

Taking the No. 4 spot at the U.S. box office last weekend was Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles: Out of the Shadows which sold just under $15 million last weekend, upping the film's 10-day sales total to over $61 million. Add to that, the film has made another $55 million abroad. Rounding out last weekend's Top 5 was X-Men: Apocalypse which looks like doo doo to me, but sold another $10 million last weekend to bring its 10-day worldwide sales total to over $478 million. Whoa. Also of note, The Lobster sold about $1 million in tickets in the U.S., bringing its five-week total to just over $5 million. Great, great, great movie.

ScreenTime

New This Week: Two big films open wide this weekend, starting with comedy flick Central Intelligence, directed by Rawson Marshall Thurber and starring Dwayne The Rock Johnson, Kevin Hart, Amy Ryan and Aaron Paul. Looks really fun to me, but probably not a film I would go pay NYC theater prices for. Also out is the sure-thing major hit Finding Dory, directed by Angus MacLane and the king, Andrew Stanton (John Carter, WALL-E and Finding Nemo). Huge hit, I'm telling' ya. Check out the vocal talents involved: Ellen DeGeneres, Albert Brooks, Michael Sheen, Ed O'Neill, Ty Burrell, Diane Keaton, Eugene Levy, Idris Elba, Dominic West, Bill Hader, Kate McKinnon and others. Whoa, baby.

Also out via limited release: Argentina, Clown, The Last King, My Love, Don't Cross That River, A Remarkable Life and Tickled.

Finally, I just wanted to say look out! Nicolas Winding Refn's new film, The Neon Demon, is out in another week. Film of the Year contender, for me at least.

Science Lessons for Beginners

Seven Brief Lessons on Physics by Carlo Rovelli, Riverhead Books, 2016

If you've paid attention to the news beyond the stories about politicians and terror attacks over the past few years, you've probably noticed a multitude of stories about things like the Higgs boson and gravity waves. If you're like most people, you've had no idea what to make of those stories, aside from the writer's assertion that the existence of these things, whatever they are, is very important to physicists and they – the elusivethings, whatever they are – have either been found or they haven't. It's all very confusing for the non-physicist, and that's a problem that Carlo Rovelli aims to fix with this tiny little book about physics.

The book consists of seven short chapters based on articles that Rovelli wrote for an Italian newspaper. Each chapter tackles a different broad category of physics, such as Einstein's General Theory of Relativity, quantum physics, particle physics and the heat generated by black holes. Rovelli approaches it all with a breeziness that he hopes will be accessible to the non-scientist, couching complex concepts in simple metaphors and colorfully descriptive language. To back up the populist tone, he draws a portrait of both himself and Einstein as having thought their most important thoughts while lounging about on summer vacation rather than toiling away at a university, arguing that "it is thus that serious scientists are made" (a decidedly unscientific conclusion of which I'm skeptical).

However, Rovelli is effective in his attempts to make the mind-bending concepts behind theoretical physics clear and relatively easy to grasp. Although the book's chapters require a little more mental effort to process than would a CNN article on the same topic, they're entirely free of mathematics, and they rarely expect any background knowledge about science, math or history. Only occasionally does Rovelli's simplification of the material go so far as to muddle the concept being discussed, such as when he offers Einstein's "box of light" thought experiment as an important refutation of Bohr's argument for quantum mechanics, but then fails to give any explanation of what the "box of light" was all about.

In the end, it doesn't matter very much, because the most charming effect of Rovelli's book is the way in which it makes all of theoretical physics seem like a well-educated shot in the dark. Einstein's relativity and quantum mechanics contradict each other, he explains, and although they're both pillars of almost all modern physics, they can't both be true as they're currently understood (and so far, all attempts to reconcile them have come to naught). The Standard Model of particle physics is "the best that we have" at the moment, in terms of a way to describe how the universe works, except that it doesn't explain gravity, a component of the universe that it's hard for most of us to ignore, or dark matter, a hypothetical type of matter that seems to make up about a quarter of everything in the universe.

On Books

In fact, the humble way that Rovelli writes about physics, rather than reducing our view of the universe to something narrow and cold, opens up a picture of wonder and expansiveness. Everything we think we've figured out about the universe calls up a host of new questions, pointing out how little we actually know. There's nothing in Rovelli's explanation of physics that makes a complete knowledge of the universe by humans seem possible (and nothing in his science rules out the existence of God). If anything, the book argues that humankind is anything but consequential.

Don't fret, though. Ultimately, Rovelli offers comfort. Even if, as quantum mechanics argues, the universe (and that includes us) is nothing but the interaction of energy, if matter (and that includes us) doesn't actually exist, there is undeniably the perception of matter, and the result of the interaction of energy, sometimes, is "tears and laughter, gratitude and altruism, loyalty and betrayal, the past that haunts us and serenity."

It's Rovelli's reassuring reconciliation of the unbending facts of science and the mundane mystery of being human that makes his little book so satisfying.

number "Honey Bun." That song also showcases the comedic chops of Brock Ireland, who plays the loud-mouthed Luther Billis.

Maggie Hunter plays Bloody Mary, the entrepreneurial mother of Liat. Hunter is dynamic in her role, singing one of the show's most famous songs, "Bali Ha'i" and the more lighthearted "Happy Talk." The latter song includes some beautiful choreography by Kandi Wagner and performed gracefully by Rudolph.

Speaking of choreography, the dancing in "There Is Nothing Like a Dame" is so energetic and fun that one of the dancers on opening night was actually kicked in the head (he was fine). The men's chorus is strong, both vocally and physically, and Tyler Hanford (Stewpot) and Freddy Fuelling (Abner) were particular standouts.

Sadly, the women's chorus in South Pacific has little to do but jog across the stage in shorts, although they do get to back up Nellie in "I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Outta My Hair" and "I'm in Love with a Wonderful Guy." Erin Bean (Dinah) does have a funny bit when she tries to distract de Beque while Nellie hides in the shower.

The set, designed by Therrin Eber, features a real working onstage shower, and the costumes, designed by Jill Bixler, give each character their own personality.

Goeglein's catered dinner includes dinner rolls and butter, broccoli crunch salad, pork cutlet with caper sauce, scalloped potatoes, Caribbean blend vegetables, and lemon cake.
