Promenade Park plans autumnal activities

As the weather begins to cool and outdoor options dwindle, there are still fun ways to enjoy “The New Park” downtown which allow us to be cautious while enjoying the outdoors for as long as we can.

Among upcoming events at Promenade Park will be a chance to learn a new cuisine, enjoy a scavenger hunt, and take part in a Halloween mystery.

GERMAN FOOD HIGHLIGHTED

Oct. 17 is a big day at the park with two unique events scheduled.

The quarterly Confluence Kitchen, where international dishes are featured and prepared, puts the spotlight on Germany, which should appeal to many in our area.

The Riverfront website says, “Come swap recipes, pick up some words in German, snap a few selfies at the themed photo booth, and learn about the real fairy tales from the Brothers Grimm. Delicious German food will be available for purchase. All ages are welcome.”

Early registration is encouraged since space is limited to allow for proper spacing. Early registration is also rewarded with a cheaper fee of $5 through Oct. 9, and $8 after that date.

The event takes place from noon until 3 p.m. and also includes a contest for best dressed wiener dog, with the winner announced at the end of the cooking demonstration.

LOOK OUT FOR RAVENS

Also on Oct. 17 is the Raven Scavenger Hunt, where 11 ravens will be disguised throughout the park.

Anyone who wishes to participate should come with camera to snap pics of the decorative ravens, leaving them in place for others to find.

Those who show their pictures at the Information Tent will be entered into a drawing to win a free pair of Winter Cozy tickets on January 23.

All ages are welcome and admission is free.

CREEPY FUN FOR 21 AND OVER

With Halloween still a bit of an unknown and Fright Night already scaled back, it's good to know that some fun ways to celebrate are still on the calendar.

Promenade Park will host Nev-ermore: The Cask of Amontillado, a 21-and-over event which should provide some creepy fun for adults.

Participants are invited to explore the murder scene, collect evidence, find clues, solve puzzles, and interrogate the suspects. Appetizers and drinks are available, and tickets are $75 per person or $70 per person if registering two or more.

For more information about these and other upcoming events, visit riverfrontfw.org and keep reading Whatzup.

Sip some wine at Headwaters with safety in mind

Festival is still on, but now with protocols

BY STEVE PENHOLLOW

WHATZUP FEATURES WRITER

Nichole Thomas may have come up with an entirely new COVID-19 safety protocol.

"We are going to perfect the sipping-in-line-while-wearing-a-mask maneuver," she said in a phone interview with Whatzup.

OK, that's not so much a safety protocol as it is a safe satisfaction protocol.

SIPPING WITH SAFETY

Knowing how to safely sip while waiting in line is a valuable skill to have in any number of contexts these days, but it is especially relevant when you are at wine festivals.

Wine festivals have been about as common in Indiana this year as lemur sightings, but Thomas' Michiana Wine Festival is going ahead as planned.

Well, maybe not quite "as planned." It was postponed from April to October and a few pandemic-related constraints that haven't constrained the four-year-old festival in the past will be constraining it this time around.

Still, it's one of the few festivals to grace usually festival-packed Headwaters Park this year. It will happen on Saturday, Oct. 10.

The Michiana Wine Festival has grown quite a bit since it debuted in spring of 2017.

The first year, there were 1,500 attendees, Thomas said.

"We have since gone as high as 4,000," she said.

This year, the festival will more closely resemble its inaugural incarnation.

"There is not a hard and fast (attendance) number that we're limited to," Thomas said. "But I would say it will be very similar to that first festival: in the 1,000 to 1,500 range."

Because of the loose cap on attendance, Thomas and her fellow organizers decided to limit the number of participating wineries as well.

"As an attendee, you may be thinking, 'Why are you limiting the wineries?'" she said. "Well, we want it to be profitable for the wineries. And if there are 21 or 22 wineries and only a thousand to fifteen hundred people, that's not really a good day for them."

SMALLER BUT STILL FRUITFUL

Thomas is hoping to be able to host ten wineries.

"We're still waiting for some wineries to get back to us and let us know if they're even available on the 10th," she said.

Wineries confirmed at the time of Whatzup's interview with Thomas were Fruitshine Winery of Monticello, Rettig Hill Winery of Osgood,

MICHIANA WINE FESTIVAL

Noon-6 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 10
Headwaters Park
333 S. Calhoun St., Fort Wayne
$10-$75 · (260) 422-7625

Huckleberry Hill Winery of Bloomfield, Byler Lane Winery of Auburn, Windzerwald Winery of Perry County, Ertel Cellars of Batesville, Harmony Winery of Knightstown, and Ash & Elm Cider Company of Indianapolis.

"That one's a little different," Thomas said of Ash & Elm. "They do hard ciders. They bring some wine-type products and they bring their ciders. The guys tend to like Ash & Elm because it offers them more of what they're used to."

Fruitshine is apparently worth the price of admission all by itself.

"There are people, and I am not kidding you about this, who will buy a ticket just to go to Fruitshine," Thomas said. "They will buy a ticket, come to Fruitshine, get their things, stock up, and then leave."

One of the lures of Fruitshine is that it uses no preservatives or sulfites in its wines.

Food trucks scheduled to be at the fest include One Love Jamaican Cuisine, Affiné, Rico Suave Mexican Cuisine, Locavore, Who Cut the Cheese, Flora and Lily's Mexican Kitchen, and Wicked Good Cupcakes.

The festival will be more spread out than usual as an encouragement to social distancing. The wineries and craft vendors will be under the Lincoln Financial Pavilion with the food trucks and a live music stage northwest of the pavilion near the fountain.

BETTER GET YOUR TICKETS EARLY

Some things about the festival haven't changed at all.

The $30 admission price still gets you a branded wine glass. That is what you use to sample wines.

"We've always done it that way," Thomas said. "I love that because you are only touching your own cup."

The festival's "four favorite musicians" are set to return.

"They are Hubie Ashcraft, Adam Strack, Jon Durnell, and Sunny Taylor," Thomas said. "They have played in a rotation at our festival since it started. And we just love them. People just love them. They are always good crowd pleasers. And they love to be there."

There is still a 5K on the night before the fest, although it will be limited to 130 participants, Thomas said.

The finish line is where the finish line of every local race should be: Rudy's Wine and Cigar Shop.

Most festival organizers have chosen cancellation over postponement in 2020, but Thomas and the other Michiana Wine Festival founders felt it was important to try to make their festival happen safely as a way of returning to some semblance of normalcy.

"We're all trying to navigate a new normal," Thomas said. "My partners and I sat down and said, 'If we're going to navigate a new normal, we don't want it to be a new normal that doesn't have live events.'"

The paucity of events in 2020 has led to increased interest in the few festivals and concerts that have gone on as scheduled.

Terry Doran's RiverDrums event at Promenade Park in mid-September had much higher attendance than it has had in previous years.

Given Fort Wayne's residents' love of deciding at the last minute how they want to spend their impending free time, Thomas said she is prepared to cut off ticket sales when the Michiana Wine Festival reaches a certain capacity.

She said she doesn't have a specific number in mind, but she will know that threshold when she sees it.

If you intend to attend, it might be a good idea to purchase tickets early.

And be sure to practice Thomas' sipping-in-line-while-wearing-a-mask maneuver.

"We tried it at a meeting the other night," Thomas said. "We got our masks on, we had our wine in our hands, we pulled the masks down, we sipped the wine, we put the masks back up."

Reconnect with artists at multiple locations

Support art with new Falling for Art event

BY MICHELE DeVINNEY
WHATZUP FEATURES WRITER

The arts community has been hard hit by the realities of 2020, especially for artists who do their biggest business through art fairs and festivals all summer long.

Among many annual arts events in the area is the Rural Studio Tour, one that invites art lovers to visit a variety of art studios to see the artists at work and, hopefully, snag a piece or two for their own collections.

With people beginning to tentatively return to some basic events, Joe and Kathy Pelka have finally taken a long-hoped-for plan and put it into reality. It's similar in many ways to the Rural Studio Tour which would have taken place in May.

DRAWN HERE FROM CALIFORNIA

"When my wife and I lived in California, we used to be involved with the Ojai Art Festival, which was a tour all about art," Joe Pelka said in an interview with Whatzup. "Los Angeles really supported it, and it's one of the best studio tours in the country."

The very fact that Pelka and his wife now live in Fort Wayne is a testimonial to the way both this city and the surrounding areas support the arts.

"We've lived here 16, almost 17 years now," Pelka said. "We were renting a house in Ojai when our son was young, but we knew we could never afford to own the house we were renting if we were going to keep doing art shows. Basically if you want to be able to afford a house in California, you better marry someone with a lot of money."

"We knew the best art fairs and festivals were in the Midwest, so we drew a circle on a map and saw that every place we'd want to go was within eight hours of Fort Wayne, and here we knew we could afford to buy a house."

Having enjoyed being here and being part of the community of artists here and beyond, the Pelkas had long spoken of bringing the idea behind the Ojai Arts Festival to the Fort Wayne area. But their plans became a plan of action this spring.

Pelka Ceramics, 4529 Lima Road, Fort Wayne

Kristy Jo Beber Stoneware Pottery, 9719 Hosler Road, Leo

Artistry in Wood, 12724 N. County Line Road E., Spencerville

The Art Farm, 17612 N. County Line Road E., Spencerville

Free admission · (260) 241-7968

"Fort Wayne has a lot of artists here," Pelka said. "And with the pandemic we just thought 'Why not?' If people are willing to come out now, and they seem to be to a certain degree, this is the perfect time to do this. The pandemic has crushed studio artists because their marketplace, which is the fairs and festivals, is gone. We're planning to make this an annual event and hope that it gets bigger and better each year."

MAKING PEOPLE FEEL SAFE

As is the case with many current events, there is going to be a tremendous amount of care taken to make people feel safe.

To that end, studios will have both indoor and outdoor areas available, so if some don't feel comfortable in a contained environment, they can stay outdoors to accommodate their concerns. For those who opt to go inside, masks and social distancing will be observed.

Among those participating are The Art Farm in Spencerville featuring the work of Lisa Vetter and Paul Siefert; Kristy Jo Beber's Stoneware Pottery in Leo; I-Wood Artist, the Churubusco studio of Fred and Rhonda Inman; Pelka's own Handmade Clay Art and Acrylic Paintings in Huntington; and William Steffen's Artistry in Wood in Spencerville.

The Inmans will also host guest wood artist Shelly Bice of Against the Grain.

Pelka found those he approached about being involved to be thrilled for the opportunity to show their work again.

"Everyone knows how hard 2020 has been, and we just want something positive to come out of it," Pelka said. "It was hard to say in May or June how we were going to be able to do this. I do ceramics, but I had always wanted to start painting. So this was the time for me to start doing that, and these paintings will be seen for the first time in public. Personally, one of the things I'll think about five years from now is, 'That was when I started painting!'"

Pelka and his wife will also remember that this was when they finally put their hope for an Ojai-style studio tour into action, and it's something that will last long after the pandemic is over.

HOPING FOR FUTURE GROWTH

Pelka credits his wife for allowing him to focus on his art while she handles the business end of the studio. He said her organizational skills are a big reason they have big hopes for the future of Falling for Art in the years to come.

"We're starting small this year because we want to make people feel comfortable coming out and provide a safe environment," Pelka said. "But in the future we want to continue to grow and build on what we're starting now. We want to make it an annual event on the same weekend in October, and maybe someday we'll build it to where it's a two-day event. Maybe people in Chicago will think, 'This is a good weekend to go to Fort Wayne,' and we'll start bringing in people from outside the area who stay at our hotels and eat at our restaurants."

Pelka said it's "eye opening" how many artists are in his adopted hometown, and he wants to get that message out in the years to come. For anyone who wants more details for this year and to see the event evolve in the future, the Falling for Art Facebook page is the place to visit. Pelka just hopes this will provide a respite from the difficulties of this year.

"We just want to bring a bit of positivity and a little bit of sunshine to people's lives," he said. "As an artist, our responsibility is to uplift people during these weird times. We're elated to have the artists that are with us this year."

Top-notch guitarist, bassist in town to teach

Sweetwater snagged some great musicians for its upcoming Master Classes!

Guitar shredders will be excited to know that one of the original melodic thrash guitarists and Testament-leg-end Alex Skolnick will instruct a class on Wednesday, Oct. 21, from 7-9 p.m. His class will focus on harmonic, melodic, creative, and technical guitar playing styles from hard rock and metal to jazz and many points in between. This is open to all ages and there is no doubt you will leave a better guitar player.

The same evening, bassist Stu Hamm will demonstrate and discuss the techniques that helped add to the lexicon that shaped generations of bass players. Hamm has performed and recorded with the likes of Steve Vai, Frank Gambale, and Joe Satriani. This is also an all-ages clinic that will have Hamm performing his best-known solo pieces followed by a Q&A session.

Each of these classes is only $100 and tickets can be purchased through Eventbrite. For more info on these classes and future events, go to Sweetwater.com.

TO BREATHE AGAIN'S ALBUM

The local hard rock outfit To Breathe Again are set to release their debut album Breaking the Silence on Friday, Oct. 9. This gem is comprised of 10 tracks featuring a handful of one-word titles such as "Warriors," "Enemy," "Shell," "Give," and "Scream."

The material was recorded, mixed, and mastered in guitarist Greg Tyzzer's bedroom. The album will be available on release day on every major streaming platform. Right now, the only way to get your hands on a physical copy is to hit them up directly.

The guys would like to have some sort of release party, but that's still up in the air since we're still dealing with COVID restrictions. Also, the band is still looking to add a couple permanent members to the lineup. Good luck with the release, guys!

SAMPLE SOME AMBROSIA

Ambrosia Orchard Cidery & Meadery will host its second Bee-Day Bash on Saturday, Oct. 17, from 2-10 p.m. Believe it or not, they have been serving up those tasty beverages south of Fort Wayne along U.S. 27 for two years now.

To celebrate, a few of our top craft brew makers will be on site, including Hop River, 2Toms, and Dot & Line. Laz's Cuban Café will serve up some of the best authentic Cuban cuisine, so come hungry.

Plus, what sort of celebration would it be without music? Starting at 3 p.m., Stratton Way will hit the Orchard stage followed by Jana Debusk.

DEATHE METAL ALBUM

The local death metal act Cremated Souls will have their Masterpiece of the Inverted One CD release party at The Muse on Main on Friday, Oct. 2, at 8 p.m. They will be joined that evening by friends Bhopal Assault, Kill Thy Neighbor, Mantra of Morta, and Pharohound.

This is an all-ages show with tickets $10 at the door and $8 for presale online. The first 10 people through the door will get a merch discount from Cremated Souls, so get there early and go home with some swag.

If you cannot wait until the show to get your hands on a CD, rumor has it you can find it at Wooden Nickel.

Out and About covers Northeast Indiana's most interesting music and arts events. Send your announcements to info@whatzup.com.

GREAT THINGS TO DO IN FORT WAYNE AND BEYOND

Steven Curtis Chapman and Mac Powell

Dusk on Monday, Oct. 12
Van-Del Drive-In
19986 Lincoln Highway
Middle Point, Ohio
$100-$175 for up to six people per vehicle
(419) 968-2178

Two Contemporary Christian music heavyweights are teaming up to bring you some much needed live music.

Steven Curtis Chapman and Mac Powell will visit the Van Del Drive-In Theater in Middle Point, Ohio, on Monday, Oct. 12, for what is sure to be an evening that is full of inspirational songs you probably already know by heart.

Chapman, widely recognized as the most rewarded artist in Christian music history, has released more than 25 albums during his career with ten of them achieving

Steven Curtis Chapman

Gold or Platinum status.

Powell, former singer for Third Day, has had 28 No. 1 Christian hits during his time with that group.

The tour is the latest installment of a series of Awakening Events-produced shows and comes as drive-in theaters across the country become concert hotspots.

It's a way for artists to continue to perform for fans while helping to make sure social distancing guidelines are observed during the COVID-19 pandemic.

For those who have yet to experience a show at a drive-in, the experience is often described as reminiscent of a festival.

Concert-goers will be spread out on the lawn, in their cars, and alongside their vehicles with a big screen behind the stage showing the video of the live concert.

This particular show will be a full concert with production as good as any you could see in a traditional venue, with concert quality sound that will reach the entire area rather than piped through the typical drive-in audio streams to car radios.

Middle Point is about 15 miles east of Van Wert, and the drive-in is just off U.S. Highway 30. — Chris Hupe

7-10 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 31

4410 Arden Road, Fort Wayne

$15-$30 · hysterium.com

Are you ready for Halloween season? Are you ready for the excitement, suspense, and thrills of one of the best haunts in the area?

Then you will want to make sure to visit Hysterium, located at 4410 Arden Road in Fort Wayne just off Engle Road on the southwest side of the city.

Celebrating another year of "Anarchy: Patients Rule," the award-winning haunt features realistic scenes designed to scare the pants off of every guest who dares enter the building.

As the name implies, the patients of Hysterium have taken over the asylum and now run things the way they want to run them. They've turned their delusions into reality and created an experience you won't soon forget.

Hysterium is packed with impressive details. In the past the haunt has featured full-sized skeletal horses with riders, old-fashioned carnival posters, and a mortuary complete with a hook-laden meat conveyor systems. But things change every year, so don't go in thinking you already know what is around every corner. It's not uncommon to involuntarily emit blood-curdling screams at any of several stops throughout the journey.

Hysterium is open Friday and Saturday nights through Oct. 31 plus a couple of Thursdays, Oct. 22 and 29.

Prices go up for visas for foreign musicians

It just got a bit more expensive for foreign musicians to tour the U.S. If and when touring begins again, touring artists will have to pay twice as much for their visas beginning in October.

The Department of Homeland Security announced that costs for the P visa, which can be used for performers entering a competition or any family members, and the Q visa, which is intended for individuals who possess “extraordinary ability in the sciences, arts, education, business, or athletics,” will double. Additionally, the visa waiting period will increase in length, making it even harder for overseas acts to plan any kind of a tour.

Who wins? It is the government that stands to make more money. Who loses? The fans, of course, as this may deter some independent artists from touring here as it wouldn't make sense from a money perspective.

VINYL SALES TOP CD SALES AGAIN

It's now official. Vinyl sales have surpassed CD sales in the U.S. for the first time since 1986.

At one time, CDs were thought to be the superior technology, so we all converted our cassettes and vinyl records into the new state-of-the-art CD format.

Now, more than 30 years later, vinyl is the lifeblood of independent music stores since many have embraced the analog sound of vinyl and begun purchasing music in that format again.

According to a new report from The Recording Industry Association of America, vinyl records accounted for $232.1 million of music sales in the first six months of 2020, whereas CDs have only brought in

SNAKE HONOR FOR METALLICA

Among the honors bestowed upon James Hetfield of Metallica is having a newly discovered venomous snake species named after him.

The snake, a species of bush viper, has been dubbed Atheris hetfieldi. It was discovered at Bioko Island in the Gulf of Guinea by a team of Portuguese and American scientists, led by Metallica fan Luis Ceriaco.

Ceriaco describes the snake as having a “triangular-shaped head and strongly-keeled scales, which gives them a dragon-like appearance and is consistent with the image of a singer of a heavy metal band. Also, we think that a mysterious venomous and cool-looking snake that lives in the base of a volcano lost in the middle of the tropical forest is very relatable to heavy metal.”

The public isn't ready to swarm the theaters — yet

That's a wrap on the Tenet experiment. Verdict: Failure. Conclusion: Times remain tough for industries that require people to gather in public.

Director Christopher Nolan, Producer Emma Thomas and Warner Bros. bet big that the public was ready to congregate again and, well, it appears as if they were wrong.

So why did Christopher Nolan, a very bright, intellectual, educated type, allow Warner Bros. to release his film when he knew that most media outlets were still telling everyone to stay home?

So here's the gist of Nolan's presumed options for the release of Tenet as the fall of 2020 approached:

1. Do what he did, and release the film once his team believed that the majority of the public was willing to start heading out into public again.

2. Release it online now, hope everyone loves it, then eventually do runs of it in theaters, post-COVID.

3. Simply shelf the film until conditions to go to the theater are significantly better.

He chose wrong, which isn't something we're used to from Nolan.

And now that same conversation is what's happening in Hollywood right now. After the legendary box office failure of Tenet, which has made just $41 million domestically in four weeks, all the big studios are rethinking their release strategies for their tentpole films.

Some are simply holding off until December while others are pushing back to next summer and others (eg. Steven Spielberg's West Side Story remake) until next Christmas.

I also have to believe that a lot of studios and filmmakers are rethinking how this whole system is going to work going forward. Don't be surprised if the streaming services release some really good, new films before the end of the year. And don't be surprised if the Academy releases a whole lot of new standards for qualifying films.

Who knows, maybe this shake-up will result in some good things? Like maybe, fingers crossed, we'll get a short drive-in theater run of Wes Anderson's The French Dispatch this fall, followed quickly by a VOD situation. And then, of course, eventually it gets passed around the streaming services and eventually just about everyone in the civilized world sees the film. Just like how everyone who wants to see Tenet will eventually see Tenet, viruses be damned.

But, for now, that's pretty much that on the Tenet experiment.

One last quick thought about the movies before I go:

I've been hearing buzz that the above-mentioned The French Dispatch (initially set to be released this past summer, but currently on hold) is stone cold brilliant. The film is done and just sitting there, all warm and cuddly and cute and precious and heart-warming. And you and I both know going to theaters isn't in the cards for a good while. So hey, Wes Anderson — your move.

Old 97's

Twelfth

Twelfth is, surprise, the twelfth album from alt-country veterans Old 97's, but it's the first album from the band that truly marks frontman Rhett Miller's sobriety.

Miller has been sober for several years, but he says that Twelfth is the first album on which he's felt capable of entirely taking the songwriting reins. The result is a collection of songs that is optimistic from the perspective of someone on the other side of substance abuse and self-destructive behavior. But the optimism mostly lies in juxtaposition with the darkness of the past, making it hard to see the record as an entirely upbeat project.

That's not to say the album isn't often musically raucous. Opener "The Dropouts" looks back at the days when the band were hard-partying slackers, and "Bottle Rocket Baby" is a wry warning not to get involved with said slackers. Both songs are done up in twangy punk style, full of energy despite their dark irony.

The album's strongest points, however, are when Miller goes beyond musical simplicity and tells more specific, wordier stories. "I Like You Better" is a clever, funny way of celebrating the triumph of love over self-destructive habits.

"Belmont Hotel" is an effective, unique description of the same triumph, comparing the revitalization of a relationship with the revitalization of an old hotel.

Twelfth is on one hand typical Old 97's, filled with fuzzy, tremolo-laden riffs, and on the other something older and more restrained. It lacks the pop and sizzle of, say, 1999's Fight Songs, but that's appropriate given the dark places that Miller and the rest of the band have passed through in the meantime. — Evan Gillespie

Josh Turner

Country State of Mind

Josh Turner has always been a traditionalist, so it's no surprise that he'd put together an album full of covers of old country tunes. What's a little surprising is that he'd choose to cover songs from the '80s and '90s, rather than reaching back a little further into the history of the genre.

Turner's distinctive baritone is a good match for most of his song choices, and the album is a satisfying, if often regretfully unsurprising, homage to some singers from a few decades ago.

The album's track list calls upon some of the biggest names from late-20th-century country. George Strait shows up via "Desperately," Randy Travis is on board with "Forever and Ever, Amen," and John Anderson is represented with "I've Got It Made."

Perhaps unwisely, Turner invites the songs' originally singers — including Travis and Anderson, as well as Kris Kristofferson on "Why Me" — to contribute. Their aging voices set a jarring contrast with Turner's sonorous tones.

For many of the songs, though, Turner either handles the vocals alone or brings in more contemporary guests. It works when he goes solo on Waylon Jennings' theme to The Dukes of Hazard, but it doesn't work as well when Runaway June joins him on "You Don't Seem to Miss Me." That song was something of an oddity when Patty Loveless and George Jones did it in 1997, and it feels even more awkward in Turner's hands.

Turner digs a little deeper on occasion. Hank Williams shows up twice, once via a cover of his "Alone and Forsaken" and again as a ghost in Alan Jackson's "Midnight in Montgomery." But the standout is the album-closing "The Caretaker." This solemn memento mori was written and recorded by Johnny Cash in 1959. But while Cash delivered the song with a ghoulish giggle, Turner takes it totally seriously, ending the album on a genuinely contemplative note. — Evan Gillespie

Johnny Woods

Pavilions

Johnny Woods' brilliant Pavilions is a magical record which encapsulates all the things we love about minimalist electronic music.

This Buchla-driven electronic album pulsates with a synthetic heartbeat that captures a sort of otherworldly optimism within its compositions. Woods is a visual artist by trade, working in film and video. He has created videos and live experiences for Big Boi, Neon Indian, Classixx, Bear in Heaven, Chrome Canyon, and many more. I feel this gives Woods a unique advantage in creating these improvised Buchla experiments. The visual translates beautifully into the aural.

On Pavilions, Johnny Woods sets the controls for deep space, giving us a Komische journey steeped in early '70s German sonic experiments. Kraftwerk, Cluster, Morton Subotnick, and Suzanne Ciani live within the bleeps and blips, as well as contemporaries Kaitlyn Aurelia Smith and Invisible Isinvisible. It's a stunning and hopeful work of electronic music.

"Lenticular Halls" is the right song to welcome you into Pavilions, light and airy like Cluster in the early '80s but with a more optimistic lean in the sunlit melody.

The repetition in "Monorail" gives it an almost hallucinatory feel. There's a Kraftwerk vibe here as well that gives the song a familiarity. "Autowalk" feels like a melancholy walk on the moon, desolate, deep, and ever pondering.

Elsewhere, "World of Motion" captures the beauty of the relationship between man and machine. Years of working with the Buchla and learning its ins, outs, and circuitual secrets have led up to this album and this exquisite track. And "Dawn Two" closes things out with a mysterious feel and sparse connection to the unknown.

Backtracks CLASSIC ALBUMS

Papa John Creach
Filthy! (1972)

"Papa" John Henry Creach had an illustrious career as a jazz bluesman. He played the violin with everybody from Louis Armstrong and T-Bone Walker to the Grateful Dead. He's probably best known for his tenure with Jefferson Airplane, but his solo career was absolutely golden.

This was his second solo record with his band Zulu and is a refreshing approach to jazzy-jammin' blues rock n' roll.

It opens with "Filthy Funky," a hip bluegrass number that is warm in its form and features Venetta Fields on backing harmonies. "No More Country Girls" is soaked in blues but finishes with an almost country-jazz arrangement with its keys and percussion.

And the harmonica from the legendary Harvey Blackstone is also noteworthy.

Side one closes with "Walking the Tou-Tou," written by Jorma Kaukonen from Jefferson Airplane. It's a rock n' roll boogie-woogie number with southern guitars and a blazing fiddle from Creach that makes you want to get up and dance.

Side two kicks off with "Everybody Wants My Good Thing," a track that features some great horns and some suggestive lyrics without being too overt. If you've stuck with the album this far, you'll realize that fiddle had a place in this type of sound. In its truest form, it added some depth to the overall vibe, but it wasn't the centerpiece.

"Give Me an Hour in Your Garden" is above-average blues, and Creach's vocals in front of a groovy guitar flow through your body as you soak in the horns and fiddle for almost six minutes.

Creach played on more than 50 records in his career and was an essential part of the San Francisco music scene when it was the center of the universe. He passed away in early 1994, but his fiddle and musicianship will timelessly live on. — Dennis Donahue

It's a fine line between noise and art. Pavilions is very much art in every sense of the word, connecting us to sonic worlds we've yet to truly understand. With excellent albums like Johnny Woods' Pavilions, we're that much closer to some kind of electrical understanding of the universe — or at the very least, a great record to listen to on the way. — J. Hubner

Superb performances mark grim crime epic

Based on the debut novel of Donald Ray Pollock, the new Netflix film The Devil All the Time is the kind of grim crime epic that Hollywood is too timid to make now and will likely be even more hesitant to make moving forward.

As has been the case for the past few years, but especially during the year when the pandemic brought movie theaters to their knees, Netflix is more than willing to take on the challenge of making the mid-budget thrillers that people statistically haven't been leaving the house to see.

Wisely, they've taken a cue from a key box office principle: People are drawn to familiar faces and names when they consider what to watch. This film is packed to the brim with both.

Reel Views

BRENT LEUTHOLD

Taking place over multiple decades in the south central Ohio town of Knockemstiff (yes, it's a real place), the sprawling story begins as Marine vet Willard Russell (Bill Skarsgård) meets a pretty waitress (Haley Bennett) at a diner. They soon have their son Arvin (Tom Holland), but after a number of years pass, Arvin loses both of his parents in a pair of terrible tragedies. Arvin is taken in by his grandmother Emma (Kristin Griffith) and adopted step-sister Lenora (Eliza Scanlen), who is ruthlessly bullied by classmates on a daily basis.

A violent streak begins to develop in Arvin as he seeks revenge on those who threaten Lenora and his family, setting into motion events that eventually involve the local reverend (Robert Pattinson) and the town's sheriff (Sebastian Stan).

The film's stunning cast, which also includes Riley Keough, Jason Clarke, and Harry Potter alum Harry Melling, is practically a who's who of rising stars within mainstream and independent cinema. But this isn't just a good-looking call sheet of recognizable stars. Most of the actors are doing some of the best work of their careers here.

At the center of this expansive "Southern" Gothic is Holland, who effortlessly sheds the Spidey suit and gives a fierce performance that is leagues away from the jokey tone of his Marvel Cinematic Universe output. Skarsgård absolutely dominates the film's first act, conveying the lasting impact of wartime trauma which reverberates throughout the rest of the grueling story. Even the more daring performances, especially the one turned in by Pattinson, aren't without their off-kilter rewards.

Taking on a much more complex and unwieldy narrative than that of his previous film Christine, director Antonio Campos does an admirable job of tying together these disparate characters as they ebb and flow through the tides of fate. He introduces more themes than he properly resolves, but the chief musings on cycles of violence and the dangers of organized religion come through with resounding clarity.

Aiding Campos in his storytelling is a voiceover narration by none other than the book's author, who obviously knows this story and its characters better than anybody. Despite a handful of clumsy incidents of over-explaining, Pollock's weathered timbre and measured cadence gives the film an appropriately cold-blooded quality.

Implementing 35mm film, cinematographer Lol Crawley (an ironic first name, given the movie's utterly humorless tone) tinges the frame with a subdued naturalism that compliments the rural setting swimmingly. The film's agreeable color palette and stacked cast will likely be enough to offset the bleakness of the story.

I certainly wouldn't blame audiences for wanting to seek out more uplifting material in these distressing times, but the steadfast effort put forth by Campos and company is inspiring in its own right.

The Devil All the Time is a powerful parable about the inescapable tethers of fate and familial bonds.

Theatrical cover band keeps it real — really fun

Challenging listeners part of band's appeal

BY STEVE PENHOLLOW
WHATZUP FEATURES WRITER

Sum Morz began when Crystal “C-Note” Clouse went to her longtime friend, bassist Maurice “Mo” Turner, and said, “Let’s form a band!”

And he said, “No.” That may not sound like an auspicious start. But it was the right answer at the time.

Turner didn’t believe Clouse was ready to be in a band, so she went off and did what she could to get ready and to prove to him that she was ready.

Eventually, Turner saw what he was hoping to see and Sum Morz came to be.

OBSCURITIES AND B SIDES

Sum Morz is unapologetically and enthusiastically a cover band, but it is not afraid to challenge its listeners.

Sum Morz will stoke your nostalgia, but only if your musical tastes have ventured beyond whatever has been in the Top 40 at any given moment.

“When we first got together, that was actually a goal of ours,” she said. “We didn’t want to be like every other cover band. We want B-sides. We want something you forgot you love. So we do Devo. But we don’t do ‘Whip It.’ We do ‘Girl U Want.’”

If you listen to Clouse’s radio show, “C-Note’s Sugar Hour,” on WELT, you know how eclectic her musical tastes are.

Clouse grew up in northeast Indiana’s version of the Carter Family: The Brown family.

Her parents, Ted and Pamela Brown, have fronted the band Pop N’ Fresh since 1990.

All of Clouse’s siblings are musicians and singers. All of them make a living through artistic pursuits.

Clouse said she is the only one with a conventional day job.

“I kind of get crap for it,” she said. “Why can’t you come to the jam on Thursday night?’ I’m like, ‘I have to work in the morning.’ And they’ll tell me, ‘You’re supposed to be an artist!’”

The Sum Morz lineup has stayed fairly stable over the years, except for drummers.

The band has had five of those, which sounds like a lot, but it’s 13 fewer drummers than Spinal Tap had.

Clouse said she was nearly inconsolable when the band’s first drummer left.

The reason for this is a philosophy that she inherited from her parents.

“I’ve learned that a band is family,” she said. “Your band is your family. I think that part of it drives my band crazy a little bit. But it’s really made us strong. It’s why we’re still together 12 years later.”

“It’s not just about the gig we’re going to play on Friday,” Clouse said. “It’s about, ‘How was your week?’ We’re musicians, but we’re also friends.”

HIGH ENERGY

Sum Morz is known for theatricality. Clouse has been carried into the venue on a throne and she has been conveyed to the stage via horse and carriage.

“Mo and I have a lot of choreography-type stuff that we do during shows,” Clouse said. “None of it started intentionally. I’ll look over and we’ll be doing the same thing. It progressed naturally.”

Watch this high-energy band perform and you might not immediately, or ever, guess that it has its roots in the low-energy pursuit of singing around a campfire.

The band’s name provides the biggest clue. The band’s annual musical camping trips turned into the Andy Music Fest, which gives fans of Sum Morz and other performers the opportunity to listen to two days’ worth of music and camp with the musicians.

Clouse said each member of the band corresponds to and typifies an ingredient in that campfire treat known as the s’more.

Clouse is the marshmallow, a designation that was commemorated in a music video parody of Kelis’ “Milkshake” called “My Marshmallows.” This can and should be viewed on YouTube.

Clouse as living marshmallow may “bring all the fans to the yard,” as she sings in the video, but her flamboyant stage persona belies a reserved nature.

She was so shy when first started performing that she walked away from an early karaoke stint shaking like a newborn colt.

In the band’s fledgling days, Clouse said she clung to a book with lyrics written in it like a castaway clings to wreckage. It was only when she forgot to bring it one night that she was forced to trust herself.

DEEPLY LOCAL

Unlike a lot of bands, Sum Morz has never dreamed of national or international stardom. “All of us are so deeply seated here in Fort Wayne with families and jobs,” Clouse said. “The goal was just to make music together and have fun.

“We never had an end goal,” she said. “Just do it as long as we can.”

Whenever Clouse is interviewed about the band, she worries that too much focus is being put on her. So she jumped at the chance to say a little something about each member.

Guitarist Craig Stephan: “He’s the cheerleader,” Clouse said. “You can tell if you look at our Facebook stuff that he’s the one that does it. He’s like, ‘We’re back and we’re ready to go!’”

Guitarist and saxophonist Chad Hiatt: “He’s nonchalant about everything,” she said. “It is what it is. I’m here to play.”

Drummer Phil Henschen: “Phil’s been doing it so long,” Clouse said. “He’s just really solid. He’s grateful to be out gigging.”

Guitarist Nate Shultz: “He’s got such a neat array of sounds on his guitar,” she said. “He can make it sound like a synthesizer. And he’s got such a stage confidence, it’s pretty awesome.”

Occasional drummer Nick Tamez: “He’s so talented that he just stays so busy,” Clouse said.

As for Turner, who is also a member of The Mo Show and U.R.B., Clouse said he is the hardest working musician in town.

“He will gig seven nights a week if he can,” she said.

Clouse said she doesn’t know if Sum Morz will still be around when she reaches her parents’ ages, but she thinks that she will always make music with Turner.

“In that sense, he is my musical soulmate,” she said. “We push each other.”

An article written many years ago may have given the impression that the word soulmate had other connotations.

“People asked us if we were engaged,” Clouse said, laughing. “I said he was my musical soulmate. And he is. But he’s not my soulmate in any other sense.”
